

I love writing cover letters. I believe that passing the vibe check is a great first step in us interviewing each other. Once we have communication, I will then respond with a full cover letter outlining everything about the position and the company I am excited to bring. I will market myself backed with metrics using all the information gained from that introductory conversation. Instead of you getting yet another boring boilerplate babbling of big words, likely written artificially. Most importantly, I bring commitment to the project, to the business, and to my team.

My work history has been project-focused after longer stints early on in my career. The reason for that was my choice to seek out as many different projects as I could in different fields to hone my core skillset. I have this root desire to learn as much as I can about this world. Granted that's made me a jack-of-all trades and that experience is hard to come by.

I am looking to relocate, and I can make this move within a couple of weeks.

Thanks for your consideration!

Full project and user stories with data are available on my website with portfolio and resume: <https://jeremy.life>